Brina Gehry Residence renovates a 1,200 square foot apartment in the Washington Heights district of Manhattan for a daughter of one of the most important architects in the history of the United States of America. While acting in the service of Frank Gehry and his daughter, a limited budget a sincere interest to explore drove us to elaborate upon the directives of the esteemed architect who chose to work within the iconic genre of his early works. Inexpensive materials, exposed elements of construction and particular relationships between program spaces characterised the project. Rubber tiled floors, blue Formica kitchen cabinetry, exposed wood stud framing and laminated wire safety glass were proposed throughout to the approval and delight of the father-daughter client pair.
